Sample Evidence Handling Guideline (Fictional)

1. Scope
This fictional guideline describes how a station labels and stores physical items kept as evidence.

2. Labelling
Each item gets a tag showing the case number, the date, the place of collection, and the name of the officer who collected it.

3. Packing
Items are packed separately. Wet items are dried before sealing. Sharp items are placed in a rigid container.

4. Storage
Items are kept in the locked evidence room. The key is held by the evidence clerk. Every entry and exit is written in the Evidence Movement Register.

5. Transfer to court

Items sent to court travel with a forwarding memo. The receiving clerk signs the memo, and the signed copy is filed with the case.

1. Scope (annex)

This fictional guideline describes how a station labels and stores physical items kept as evidence. This fictional guideline describes how a station labels and stores physical items kept as evidence.

2. Labelling (annex)

Each item gets a tag showing the case number, the date, the place of collection, and the name of the officer who collected it. Each item gets a tag showing the case number, the date, the place of collection, and the name of the officer who collected it.

3. Packing (annex)

Items are packed separately. Wet items are dried before sealing. Sharp items are placed in a rigid container. Items are packed separately. Wet items are dried before sealing. Sharp items are placed in a rigid container.

4. Storage (annex)

Items are kept in the locked evidence room. The key is held by the evidence clerk. Every entry and exit is written in the Evidence Movement Register. Items are kept in the locked evidence room. The key is held by the evidence clerk. Every entry and exit is written in the Evidence Movement Register.

5. Transfer to court (annex)

Items sent to court travel with a forwarding memo. The receiving clerk signs the memo, and the signed copy is filed with the case. Items sent to court travel with a forwarding memo. The receiving clerk signs the memo, and the signed copy is filed with the case.